The grounds are very neatly and appropriately arranged stands for spectators, while the race-course, a mile in lengths is fenced in. Much credit is due to the committee of arrangements for their enterprise and energy in perfecting the details, the abilities of Capt. J. H. As a proof how little the bigoted Eastern Christians of European Turkey are deserving of the sympathy of true Protestants-who advocate everywhere the principle of civil and religious liberty-we may instance the treatment of poor Jewish families quite recently in Roumania and Servia, at the very time that the latter State has been waging war against the "intolerant" Turks. It seems certain that several hundreds of Jewish families have been driven from their homes in the FOR MICRONESIA.—The Morning Star, mis. persons, however, particularly in foreign countries, may not possess very definite information concerning the exact locality of Captain Vancouver's ancherage on the shores of Oahu. I confess that, prior to my arrival in Honolulu, my own ideas on the subject were very indistinct. When milling into the harbor of Honolulu, some time ago, from the eastward, I descried from the deck of the ship, a grove of cocos-nut trees, and was informed by a Hawaiian sailor on board that the name of that locality was Wai-kiki, and that His Majesty the King of the Hawalian Islands had a marine residence in the midst of that cocca-nut grove. I made up my mind to pay a visit to Wai-kiki, on some future occasion. After my landing in Oahu, I found in the course of my readings in the work of the Historian of the Sandwich Islands, Jarves, that Wal-kiki possessed especial interest for Britons, as one of the anchorages at these Islands of the celebrated Navigator in question. It was only a day or two ago, however, that I had an opportunity of visiting this historic and truly picturesque and romantic locality. I had also another special motive for undertaking the excursion, which was, to enjoy a sight of the newly laid down Kapiolani Park, and witness the preparations for the approaching races there on Kamehameha Day, the national Hawalian boliday of June 11th. Under these circumstances, I was both honored and happy to receive and accept a very courteous invitation to take a drive in company with which was politely tendered by one of the stewards of the Races, the Hon. Scott Cleghorn. Accordingly, on a sunny afternoon of a tropical spring day in showery May, our party of three. drove out of Honolulu, in a vehicle drawn by a pair ernment on the other; beyond it, the stone Russian port, or some nearer designation, but were church of Kawalahao, with the tomb of King Lunalilo and his Sire ; farther, on, the Roman Catholic graveyard, distinguishable by its numerous crosses emerging upon the wide plain, underneath the battery of Punch-bowl hill, and soon enjoying an open view of the sea on the right hand, and the mountain chain of Oabu on the left. I had no idea previously of the extent and beauty of the plain which stretches from the foot of the hills to the beach between Honolulu and Diamond Head, studded with the pretty suburban residences of the aristocracy of the capital, occasionally contrasted with the humbler cots of the native sons and daughters of the soil. Among others, the residence, embowered in luxuriant tropical vegetation, of H. B. M.'s Commissioner and Consal General, Major James Woodehouse, was pointed out to me, as we dashed pleasantly along. Turning off the mainroad to the right, by a winding avenue, we entered the palm-groves of Walkiki, which recalled to my mind scenes of Eastern travel in my more youthful days. At one time, these groves boasted upwards of 10,000 graceful stems with their waving tufted plumes, but their number is now greatly diminished. Nice cottages, isolated, or in groups, were discernible, in the midst of the palms and acacias, and other trees of native growth. In former days, before Honolulu existed, the Kings of Oahu resided at Walkiki. Here Kamehameha the Great used to sojourn at times, after Hawaiian Kingdom. Vancouver anchored in Wal-kiki Bay, on March 7th, of the year 1792. The reigning King has a marine residence here, sur-rounded by palm-groves, and enclosed by a white paling, extending to the beach. I also saw the pret-ty marine villa of Her Majesty the Queen Dowager Emma, relict of Kamehameha the Fourth, of which Her Majesty lately became possessed, by the will of King Lunalilo, who bequeathed it to her, on the de-mise of his father. Near the shore, I noticed a pretty little white oburch, with a tall tapering steeple rising above a grove of acacies which surrounds the sacred edifice, in which church service is conducted in the Hawaiian tongue. The steeple was struck down by lightning, some time ago; but has since been restored. His reigning Majesty's two sisters also own villas and lands at Walkiki. Our party drove to the hadsome marine real-dence of H. R. H the Princess Miriam Likelike, married to the Hon. A. Scott Clegborn. It is situated farther inland from the beach, beyond the King's villa. The pleasure-grounds are band-somely laid out, with flower-beds, filled with rare and fragrant plants, conspicuous amidst which are the deep red flowers of the hibiscus, contrasting pleasantly with the vivid green of the acacia, the old familiar Indian banyan, the Hawaiian Haw, and other arborescents. The villa, into which our party entered awhile, contains interesting portraits of departed and living members of the royal family of Hawaii nei. A "grass-house," Ladicining afform me a most unequivocal surprise, as, judging -row, the name, I had taken such a place to resemble somewhat an Australian "umple;" but was astog shed to meet instead with such a charming and eligantly farnished boudoir, whose walls were constructed entirely of plaited grass-bence the name-and the roof of thatch. I also had an opportunity of seeing the cultivation of the Kalo, in which a chinese was engaged up to his knees in water ; our party having walked from the villa along a causeway beside a laro patch to some distance in the rear, to a locality where a new road from the city to Kapiolani Park is to drive through the water, which came up as high altogether the approach to the incipient Park is detestable. Another and better approach to the Park is highly desirable. On entering the Park, nearly an insular piece of ground was pointed out, as having been planted for a grave. When the trees, (which are already a foot or more in height) shall have grown, it will beautify the Park exceedingly. Our party drove quite round the race-course, which is in excellent condition for running. Between two and three thousand trees of the Algaroba, Eucalyp-tus and other species, have been planted along the sides of the numerous winding avenues into which the Park has been laid out, which occupied an area We, therefore, have thought fit, by and with the of several acres on the plain stretching from the beach to the foot of the extinct volcano of Leahi or Diamond Head, towering above it like a grim old Titan. I have seen many beautiful Parks, in all parts of the world, but have never before met with a Park boasting of an extinct volcano, as a promi nent feature in the gorgeous landscape. > sible convenience to the ladies and gentlemen who desire to witness the exciting sport. Our party having alighted awhile from the carriage, I tasted a little water from a pump-well in a rudely constructed circular thatched pervillon and it occurred to me that a nice fountain of a similar form, but better materials, would be a great addition to the the subject, that, as Biitain's great navigator, Vancouver, anchored at Waikiki, it would be a very suitable tribute to his memory to erect a bandsome fountain in Kapiolani Park, to be styled " Vancouv-

> After an afternoon most agreeably passed among the palm groves of Waikiki, and at Kapielani Park, our party drove back to Honolulu, between three and four miles distance, as Sol was bastening to his diurnal embrace with Thetis. In the light of the eventide, the mountains of Oaha to the right seemed to me still more picturesque and romantic, than in the hot sun's glare, a few hours before. The calm and stillness which rested over the retired valleys seen in the distance, of Palolo and Manoa, where is situated Punabou College, contrasted with the active bustle of the Metropolis of Hawaii nei, whither I was returning, once more, and awakened a longing for an existence in the midst of the tranquil beauties of nature rather than amongst the busy haunts of men. But, our spirited borses soon whirled us back into Honolulu, and I separated from my good friends with the feeling that I had no where spent a pleasanter afternoon than among the Palm-groves of Waikiki and in the shadows of the extinct Volcano of Leahi at Kapiolani Park, on the romantic shore expected to pass. After an agreeable half hour's visit to the pleasure-grounds and marine villa of H. R. H. the Princess Miriam Likelike, our party drove off to Kapto-lani Park. The road lay over the sands along the beach, into which the wheels of the vehicle often mank to the axie-trees, and at places it was necessary

This Park is only in its infancy, and its trees are tiny plants but a few inches over ground. The day will come when it will constitute one of the most charming and attractive scenes in the environs of Honolulu, and its unselfish originators deserve the gratitude of coming generations. I heard that His Hawaiian Majesty King Kalakana made a free gift of the land for the park-a wise and noble act. Some gentlemen with batches of workmen were actively engaged in making preparations for the race day, and I was shown the site where a commodious, grand stand is to be erected, so as to afford all pos-
